

Exiled to Iowa: Send Help and Couture

If you're a fashion lover who's ever dreamed of escaping the hustle and bustle of city life for a simpler existence in the countryside, then you'll want to read "Exiled to Iowa: Send Help and Couture." This hilarious and heartwarming memoir by fashion editor and stylist Kim Hastreiter chronicles her adventures after she leaves her glamorous life in New York City to move to a small town in Iowa.

Kim is a self-described "fashion junkie" who has spent her entire adult life working in the fashion industry. She's styled celebrities, worked on fashion shoots, and traveled the world. But after years of living in the fast-paced, high-pressure world of fashion, Kim started to feel burnt out. She longed for a simpler life, where she could focus on her passions and spend more time with her loved ones.

So, in 2016, Kim made the bold decision to leave her life in New York City behind and move to Iowa. She bought a small house in the town of Decorah, population 8,000, and set about starting a new life for herself.

At first, Kim's transition to small-town life was not easy. She missed the excitement and glamour of New York City, and she struggled to adjust to the slower pace of life in Iowa. But over time, Kim began to appreciate the simple pleasures of her new life. She loved spending time in nature, getting to know her neighbors, and volunteering in her community.

Kim also found that her love of fashion didn't disappear just because she moved to Iowa. She started a blog about her adventures in small-town style, and she quickly gained a following of readers who were inspired by her unique perspective on fashion.

"Exiled to Iowa: Send Help and Couture" is a funny, heartwarming, and inspiring memoir about following your dreams, no matter how crazy they may seem. Kim Hastreiter's story is a reminder that it's never too late to make a change in your life, and that sometimes the best things in life are found in the most unexpected places.
