Malala began speaking out for the education of girls when she was just 11 years old. She gave speeches at local events and wrote a blog for the BBC

Urdu service. In 2012, she was shot in the head by a Taliban gunman while returning home from school. The attack drew international attention to her cause and she became a symbol of resistance to the Taliban's oppression of girls.

After recovering from her injuries, Malala continued to speak out for the education of girls. She spoke at the United Nations and met with world leaders. In 2014, she was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for her work. She is the youngest person to ever receive the Nobel Peace Prize.

Malala's story is an inspiring example of the power of one person to make a difference. She has shown that even a young girl can stand up to oppression and fight for her rights.
